Ventilation Improvement in Kennels Sky-rockets: Agri-Aide® Ventilation Sales Hit New Highs

“Agri-Aide Ventilation sales to the pet industry are exploding,” says Amy Conrad, Ventilation Product Manager for Osborne Industries, Inc. “Last year Agri-Aide Ventilation Sales to the pet industry increased by an amazing 48%,” Conrad notes, “and current sales are about 179% above sales levels of two years ago.”

The ventilation frenzy first started when Agri-Aide began engineering systems for kennel owners, says Conrad. The Agri-Aide ventilation system reduces odor and provides fresh air to puppies. “Many install an engineered ventilation system to eliminate an odor problem,” says Gordon Loots, Ventilation Systems Consultant, “and the added benefit that many customers see is a drastic decrease in URI’s (Upper Respiratory Infections).”

Providing kennel owners with a fresh-air ventilation system was only part of the puzzle that Osborne Industries, Inc. set out to solve, says Conrad. Once healthy pups are available for pet retailers, the retailer then must also have a means to reduce odor and provide clean, fresh air to their puppies so that customers receive a healthy pup.

“It is vital that Pet Retailers have a properly engineered ventilation system in place to control odors and supply fresh air to puppies while waiting for a good home,” says Loots. This helps ensure that puppies will not get sick while at the pet store and reduces odors, making it a more pleasurable experience for customers and workers. “A good ventilation system makes good business sense,” says Conrad.

The Hunte Corporation, the world's leading distributor of purebred puppies to the retail pet industry, is just one of the hundreds of satisfied customers using Agri-Aide Ventilation. "After searching the ventilation industry to find the very best solution, we turned to Agri-Aide Engineers and were able to balance the inside environment and provide the clean, fresh air that our puppies need and deserve," says Andrew Hunte, President of The Hunte Corporation.
