NEWS RELEASE

Ventilation for Pet Professionals Osborne Launches New Initiative for its Agri-Aide® Ventilation System

According to Amy Conrad, Ventilation Product Manager at Osborne Industries, kennel owners and pet retailers have been under-served for years by ventilation suppliers. Recognizing this need, Conrad notes that Osborne and its engineering consultants have launched a major initiative to work more closely with pet professionals and industry suppliers. The goal for this initiative, according to Conrad, is to ensure that all animals and those who care for them can enjoy a professionally designed environment that is safe and healthy for both. Osborne Industries, Inc., Osborne, KS, has manufactured Agri-Aide® Ventilation systems for over 25 years and has extensive engineering expertise in the design of ventilation for animal facilities.

According to Osborne, hundreds of Agri-Aide users are already seeing the benefits of healthier animals. Gordon Loots, Osborne Ventilation Systems Consultant, says “Most of our customers are noticing a drastic decrease in Upper Respiratory Infections after installing a carefully engineered Agri-Aide ventilation system.” Loots notes that maintaining healthier animals means fewer pups are being rejected by brokers or customers, yielding more profit for properly ventilated kennel facilities.

The company provides an experienced systems consultant by request if after a preliminary discussion by telephone suggests the need for an on-site inspection. This consultant carefully inspects each kennel or pet store layout for an engineering fee to cover expenses. A customized ventilation system is then designed to meet the particular needs for each facility.

According to Conrad, an Agri-Aide design delivers top-performing results because Agri-Aide equipment gives the ventilation engineer a wide array of equipment options and the flexibility to create the best solution for each unique facility. Conrad says that the company strives to ensure that each equipment component is a quality leader in its class and will give its user years of trouble-free service.

Osborne Industries, Inc., is a diversified manufacturer and distributor of livestock and pet management equipment, located at 120 Industrial Avenue, Osborne, Kansas, 67473.
